Hi Polly,

The orange areas are the physical outline of what is called Shakey Lakes, which is designated by the DNR as a "proposed natural area". The Department treats proposed natural areas the same way that we treat the officially designated natural areas which have gone through legislative approval.

Rare species occur in both of the blocks but aren't necessarily evenly distributed within them. Hill's Thistle is one of the species we would like to manage for within the natural area; its distribution in the UP is limited to Chippewa County (primarily on limestone bedrock pavement and Alvar communities) and Menominee County.
